PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Excerpts from the President's Welcome at the AWC Spring Tea, April 5

On behalf of the Atlanta Woman's Club, a warm welcome to you all—family, friends, and special guests from Tallulah Falls School, TFS Board of Trustees, the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, GaFWC's 5th District, Inman Middle School, Grady High School, and Kennesaw State University. I want to take this opportunity [AWC's Spring Tea] to weave for you a little bit about the history and purpose of the Atlanta Woman's Club. A non-profit, non-partisan, non-sectarian, and philanthropic organization, the AWC was founded 114 years ago in 1895 by Rebecca Douglas Lowe, our first president, who said the purpose of the AWC was "social, literary, and humanitarian." The AWC is on the national historic registry and I've just quoted from the historic sign which stands in the front yard of the Wimbish Mansion.... All of our AWC's presidents' pictures, going back to 1895, hang at the top of the staircase leading down to the ballroom. Amazingly the pictures have survived the fires at the AWC, the most recent being about 2000, which meant full renovation of the Wimbish Mansion completed in 2002.

Of the approximately 150 women's clubs in Georgia, the Atlanta Woman's Club is Georgia's oldest woman's club. By being a member of the AWC, one is a member of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs (GaFWC) founded in 1896, as well as the international General Federation of Women's Clubs....

The mission, purpose, and work of the AWC are accomplished by women who volunteer their time, talents, and energy to help better the lives of others. We were highly honored, amazed, and humbled at the last 5th District Meeting on March 19 by walking away with 15 first place awards for our work and service to others, unprecedented, I think, in our history. So we're left with the challenge as to how we can do better next year.

We already know of one way we can do better and that is in finding new members devoted to our common purpose of volunteer service. We are a club of approximately 55 members at the present time. We've recently learned that the AWC at one time—presumably before opportunities had opened for women—had 1,000 members, and so we've challenged ourselves this year to do much better in this area. I would hope that by year's end we will have doubled our membership....

AWC is very fortunate in many ways, but two rich blessings are (1) that we don't have to do fund raisers and (2) that we own our club house and surrounding property. Our club house is this Victorian home, the Wimbish Mansion, built around 1905, which we maintain by renting out the house and this ballroom for special events. We, also, have award-winning tenants, "Opera," who occupy what used to be the Atlanta Woman's Club Auditorium, which many of us remember as we came here to various cultural events as recently as the mid-'80s. We have a proud heritage and legacy with our mission of humanitarian work which we take into the future. Symbolically, we literally reflect this in that our beautiful Victorian club house is now virtually ensconced by skyscrapers, at least "skyscrapers" by Atlanta's terms.

In looking through the AJC this morning [April 5, 2009], I found a page that reminded me of our Tea this afternoon, in the section Style which featured women's spring hats—a tradition, especially a Southern tradition—with some current trends. At the bottom of the page was one woman's comment on Atlanta's "style," and it struck me as a description of where we are today at the AWC: "Atlanta's style is still finding its voice....Atlanta seems to be caught between an older, traditional style while the new influx of people moving in from different places is bringing a more modern feel. It's pretty segmented now and still looking for its common voice."

I feel finding "our common voice" is a never-ending process, but one that AWC actually has handled very well or we wouldn't have survived 114 years. Always looking to be better, more efficient, more effective in our efforts at volunteer and humanitarian service, holding from the past that which serves us well, and letting go of those things, habits, and traditions that do not, we are about change these days. Further, in keeping with the times, we are looking for ways to diversify ourselves and increase our membership....

The annual AWC Spring Tea, complete with hats, is a tradition we've decided we like and want to keep, at least for now, and we are so happy that you all have come here today. Please enjoy Opera's "Chef Jeff's" extraordinary fare, the beautiful music provided by the "Wind and Wood Chamber Players," and, most of all, each other.

Atlanta Public School Superintendent, Dr. Beverly Hall, has recommended that Dr. Cassandra M. Ashley will be the new Principal of the merged Hill-Hope Elementary School, to be known as John Hope Elementary. Her recommendation has been supported by the Board of Education.

Members of the Education Department hope to meet with Dr. Ashley very soon to discuss ways in which our Club can assist this school, where current C.W. Hill students will attend. Hope will receive all the donated books and equipment we gave to C.W. Hill over the past few years. Mrs. Yolonda Brown, current C.W. Hill principal, will become the new Principal of the newly established Northeast Elementary school. We look forward to working with Dr. Ashley and the Hope faculty, students, and parents in coming years.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS NEWS

*By Lisa Banes

The Jane Fonda Center at Emory University is testing a new curriculum called Media Madness that's designed to give youth a healthy dose of skepticism about what they see and hear about sex in the media.

By blending health education with media literacy skills, the program teaches teens life-long lessons about standing up for themselves, limiting the influence of others on their sexual attitudes and actions, and separating what they really think and believe from what media images tell them to believe. Teens learn to distinguish between harmful and helpful media messages about sex while they acquire the skills to resist inappropriate influences. Special companion programs for parents and teachers also are included. To volunteer at the Jane Fonda Center or assist with special projects, please contact the Resources Coordinator at 404.712.4710. The Georgia Trust for Historic Preservation is sponsoring Macon Gardens, Mansions & Moonlight, a tour of Macon's finest private gardens and historic homes on May 1-3. For tickets or information, contact Hay House, 934 Georgia Avenue, Macon GA 31201 or call 478.742.8155. Historic Preservation Week is May 3-10, but Preservation Magazine notes that Atlanta is threatening to demolish one of the most notable pieces of modern architecture in the American South, Fulton County's Central Library, designed by famed architect Marcel Breuer. Thomas Little of the GA chapter of Documentation and Conservation of Sites of the Modern Movement says that the library "represents the beginning of Atlanta's desire to become a 'world-class' city, which led to construction of other landmarks such as Richard Meier's High Museum and its successful bid for the 1996 Olympics." Preservationists worry that, "Given the library's prime downtown location, the site could become attractive to developers of large-scale commercial spaces." For details, see <http://marcelbreuer.wordpress.com>, a blog created by Breuer scholars and supporters.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

By Pat Walsh, Chairman

The International Affairs Department will be making the final distribution of budgeted monies in April. Monies will be going to Operation Smile, World Ark (Heifer International), CARE, Safe Birth International, Doctors Without Borders, Habitat for Humanity International and UNIFEM (U.N. Development Fund for Women).

We will celebrate Operation Smile in June with a special dessert.

Thank you for all of your help this year. We were able to do a great deal of work with our budgeted money. We look forward to distributing budgeted funds for next year. We hope to look into the Finca Project, and perhaps do some donations relating to small wells for villages.

Remember to look at Ten Thousand Villages for gifts. This great program brings micro financing to women by making small loans to buy materials for hand made items. Ten Thousand Villages brings the products back to sell and turns the profits back to benefit the women.

We can all bring comfort and a better lifestyle in the little things that we do everyday. By saving your small change for UNICEF, buying gifts for children for your Samaritan Purse shoebox over the summer, giving thought to your charitable donations, we can change a life!

AWC LEADERSHIP ATTENDS WORKSHOPS

By Beth Jetha

In late March, members of the Board of Trustees and the Executive Board of the Atlanta Woman’s Club sacrificed one Sunday afternoon and a full day on the following Saturday to participate in a Team Building Workshop, a Club & Federation workshop, and a Strategic Planning session.

The Team Building Workshop on March 22, 2009 was led by Dr. Candy Kaspers, who brought the group together through meaningful exercises and discussion. The following Saturday morning on March 28th, state Federation officers, Mary Ruth Kimsey and Martha McElhannon, instructed members on the responsibilities of officers, function of club departments, duties of chairmen, meeting protocol, parliamentary procedures and the finer points of Club and Federation work.

After a brief lunch break, Ellen McCarty led the group for the rest of the afternoon and worked through some exercises designed to help the members develop goals for our Club. The Workshops gave not only in depth information about Club and Federation work but also provided valuable insight into the abilities of the AWC leadership and their vision for the Club.
